A baby shower is a party or celebration, normally given by a best friend, close family member, or co-worker of the mom-to-be, that occurs several months before the birth of a new baby in which expectant parents receive gifts or money for their expected child. Games add real spice and a lot of fun to showers. They are intended to make everybody occupied in the pursuit of sharing the delight and elation! Some trendy games which create jingle in the baby shower event follow and if you're fresh to baby shower games, just test out these shower games

Name Game: In this event every guest must pick out a baby name for a boy and girl (if baby's gender is known, make guests select a first and middle name). Then ask them to write the names on a piece of paper. Then they are to attempt to discover words that can be made from the names. Then give them a certain amount of time (decided by you) to inscribe down as many words as possible. At the expiry of the time period people total up the number of words they have and the one who came up with the most combinations wins.

Play the Child: Some guest at the party might be parents. So they can be asked to perform the mannerisms and actions of their kids in the form of mimicry, mono acting, and other similar actions. But it is important not to force or coax anyone into playing this game as some people might find it embarrassing to act out such events in public.

Touch-n-tell What's in the Bag: Buy 10 widespread and popular baby products (pacifier, teething ring, rattle, bottle...) and put them in a bag. Pass the bag about to the guests and provide them about 30 seconds to feel the items. Then when they pass the bag on further, they write down as many items as they think they have identified. It is helpful if you can come up with 2 of each of the 10 items, so that you can pass two bags around at the same time. The person who identifies the maximum no of items is the winner. As a bonus, the to-be-mother gets to keep all the items in the bag!
